The Rough River Packet
Capt. Ed Dancley has arranged to ply in a boat on Rhine river from Livermore to Hartford, connecting with the Green river boats at the former place. The boat will leave Hartford on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, arriving at Livermore on the evening of the same day; leaving Livermore Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays arriving in Hartford the evening of the same day. The above agreement entered into binds the parties for one year and it is expected will save to the merchants of Hartford and neighboring towns from 50 to 80 per cent on freight. The largest profit will go to the enterprise.—Oconomowoc, Wis., May 27, 1877.

Dr. Farrow's Female Friend regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels acids and poisons, and restores the system to its normal state. It is a safe medicinal agent, a tonic and a nerve-guarantor to all women, and a permanent and successful remedy for all disorders of the money paid if it is returned.

It would not pay to sell a poor medicine to those lost.

There would be any case of Chronic Catarrh of the Uterus, or any other of the Female's Diseases, that Dr. Farrow's Female Friend would cure, for an incurable one.

BRECKENRIDGE NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1894.

THE CANDIDATES.

We submit the following, not because of the beautiful poetic sentiment, the rhythm or rhyme it contains, but because of the truth and good advice for the Republican candidates. It is written by the "rich negro" who is now languishing in the Breckenridge jail awaiting transportation under a sentence of two years in the penitentiary. He is a good Democrat and it seems to be a pity that he is a horse thief!

Mr. William Ash,
You have no show at all;
Your party put you in the race
And you are plucky no more;
You have a doubtful place;
You take a fool's advice
And withdraw,
If you do not,
You will be
The worst best man
The county ever saw.

For Mr. Allen Marney
Is a judge of law.
Mr. J. O. Cunningham,
I am sorry for you;
I will tell you with ease
Mr. Cullum is no piece;
Take it in time;
See your leaders and resign,
And you are the time;
If you wait till November;
Richardson will have
The office.

The county will pay him
The wage.
And leave you and your party
Chewing of the rag.

Look out, Mr. Shelby,
Deference is on the wane;
And if it were left to prisoners,
You would not get a vote.
This is what I will tell you
Before you further advance,
I would not give a ticket
For your November chance.

Mr. Paul,
You put in your bid
Too late,
This county will go
Democratic straight.
The people say Mr. F. K. Rhodes
Is here.

If you are bound
To have a job,
Be honest.
He will ride you to town
And blick you to a limb.
As soon as he gets through
With his business
He will mount you again;
He will ride you then
Till your back
Goes sore.

And then you will be
A Democrat
Forever more.

Mr. Reuben Miller,
Am surprised at you
To undertake a job
You know you cannot do.
It would be the best thing
For you
You ever done
To resign.

Before the race is run.
Mr. Milton Board
Is a judge of law.
And just as keen a Democrat
As ever you saw.

Mr. Board will win the race,
Win it by fair means.
It is up to you to give
The justice truly.
Simply because they are green.
I dreamed a dream the other night
When every thing was still.
Mr. Board was riding Mr. Miller
Up a Breckenridge hill.

Mr. Miller said to Board
"My back is getting sore."
"There are no more for you there,
But I am a Democrat
Forever more."

Hood's Serravallo is absolutely unequalled as a blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It is the ideal spring medicine. Try it.

OBSERVATIONS.

Ma. Enroute—While journeying for a time among the coadjutors of humanity, I made some observations which I wish to dedicate to the readers of your paper.

Finding your native people tearing down the altars and stoning and slaying the prophets like Elijah, I hid in the cave and looked for the Lord to appear in the whirlwind, the earthquake and the fire. But the Lord was in neither, but in that "all small voice" that whispers, "that doeth little here."

I found your native people trying to grow strange fruit, all kinds of melons and fruits on one vine, and fearing I was in "The World of Change" I hid in the cave and looked for the Lord to appear in the whirlwind, the earthquake and the fire. But the Lord was in neither, but in that "all small voice" that whispers, "that doeth little here."

SIROCCO.

Cut worms are playing havoc with corn in this section.

Married in Louisville, the 1st inst., Mr. Will Smith to Miss Flora Shurt.

Died, at his home in Manchester, Ind., the 5th inst., of pulmonary consumption, Mr. Willie Gwartney.

Miss Maud Jones, Greenville, Ind., is expected to arrive at the home of Mr. Marshall Brown the 17th inst., for an indefinite visit.

Roast Sirocco? Sirocco, you don't roast Sirocco with sticks, he ain't built that way.

"Having been called like Bangs's Ghost, I feel forth; but since it is a woman, I come not speechless." Babbling, I don't wish you had come like Bangs's Ghost and made a tableau of yourself! Ha, ha.

Rev. Funkhouser and wife, of Little Rock, Ind., visited Mrs. Funkhouser's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Current, last week.

The mail was terribly stirred up between James Haynes and George Brown's the 6th inst. It seemed like somebody was trying to play a game of April fool.

Mrs. Enk Miller spent last week in Indiana visiting friends. Her husband who accompanied her over there only remained several days on account of the many demands on the farm at this season of the year.

Gough Grinnell, Ek and Johnnie Haynes, Brandenburg, were out last week visiting at Mr. Marshall Brown's and locating the Ark. The boys said they were going to call on Mr. Noah and inspect the interior of the ark.

Hopes that were brightened several weeks ago in regard to the prospects for apples have degenerated into a state of dejection. "Of all that glitters, gold is not," said Josiah Allen's wife or was it Allen said that? Well, it matters not, it was said by one of 'em, so it's all in the family. Brace up folks "Oh, why doth the spirit of man feel and?" Strawberries will soon be ripe and after them comes blackberries, next watermelons and then persimmons and pomegranates—whoopee—the matter with you all, any how?

"Lodging, the reason that we see alike, and why you can't see as others can be from another standpoint. We have your views now on the 'vine,' the 'Lords prayer' and 'Baptism,' give us something else to digest."

Dr. Clark, of Louisville, a former Lexingtonian, who was in our midst last week and has recently been in Lexington, informs me that the people in general of the Blue Grass region are terribly down on Breckenridge and that he has no more show for re-election than a hog has. How can it be otherwise with an intelligent class of people?

When my letter came out week before last it reminded me of a kite, which having come in contact with a cyclone, lost its causal appendage. I thought perhaps that Bahler had gotten hold of it and pulled it into the moon, but it came out all right last week. Good thing that the biggest end of it was delayed it might have paralyzed Stephensboro. Golly, I wish I had a printing press of my own, wouldn't I make people howl? and such fun.

My work keeps me so busy I can't get out to hear much news, wouldn't have entered the column this week had it not been for the purpose of thanking my friends, Brandenburg, Louisville, Bewleyville, Preston and Guyer Mad of the Messenger, for their compliments, of which I am at a loss to find words suitable for expressing my appreciation. Such unvarnished praise from the best of correspondents is indeed encouraging to one who is situated in the rural districts where the facilities for gathering news are fraught with difficulty.

Oh, yes, I wanted to straighten up that "baby business" too.

Preston, Preston, My stand woman, don't talk so loud. They'll hear you all over Mele county. That was a joke in regard to the "little ones," I declare it was. I only wrote it for the sake of amusement. My sentiments and those of Guyer Mad run in the same channel.

"The world's too big for you," you might say a child agonized for tonight? Voice received from a neighboring shore. Pray for a stock law, don't ask for more.

That is altogether a mistaken idea of yours in regard to my malignancy existing between me and the "little ones." If such was the fact, never again would I hang up a sign. —Photographer

Many times I have sat up and laughed "til the tears would roll down my face, watching my partner (who was a married man) and himself of four little specimens of wedded life pose the "class little tots (of customers who pretended to know more about the art of posing than the artist himself) whose peculiar graces, determined to make a show of great breaks of aggravated perspiration to stand out like hanging drops of rain from his "sophisticated brow." While working at Bellevue, Miss, by myself, a spirit mist came over me one evening when some ladies came into my gallery bringing in with them several small children, one of whom, a little girl of some five or six years was terribly sick and in a very bad way. A diva at her every now and then. The picture was determined to have its picture taken with the little girl who was a perfect model of beauty and grace. The artist, of course, was simple. Really, the subject was one that the most fastidious artist would have been pleased with. Again and again I posed and located my little subject and every time I would attempt to unclose the shutter in my camera exposing the plate, a little hand would go up, "what, what," would echo and re-echo like clapping two pieces together, as she would dash herself in the face with the palm of her hand, the cheeks leaving a red spot here and there, causing her little dimpled face to present the appearance of a peach, while she angrily vociferated, "Oh, that's better, that's better, that's better." Then Sirocco would fall back and give vent to peal after peal of laughter that would cause people on the streets to rush in to learn what the excitement was about.

Write a thing over this world's broad way. How often will my thoughts rest on the young girl looking for a husband and just as they reached the summit, they saw a bear coming towards them. Both men made ready and fired on him, but as he was generally the case, failed to reach a vital spot, and the bear smarting from wounds, made his adversaries. But one man by the name of Hatchet, overcame with fear, turned and fled down the side of the mountain, leaving the coward to deal with the bear single handed. And there it was with no eye to witness and nothing to depend on but his own hands that Davey Crockett killed the bear. On a tree that stood near the spot he cut his name and date, but the tree is gone and there is nothing left to mark the spot save the memory of the older inhabitants of that section. About two miles north of that mountain down between two mountains where the moon is in sight but half of the day, where a cool spring runs out from the edge of rock and at that time many miles from any settlement, was young Crockett's camp and west of this camp about three miles in a beautiful spot, shaded from the rays of the sun by beautiful evergreen trees, a place known as the Hatchet Grove yard lie the remains of Davey Crockett's wife. Some fifty paces from the above spring and near the bank of No creek stands a birch tree with Davey Crockett's name carved in the bark, date 1835.

Some Reminiscences of His Tennessee Life—A Bear Hunt—Grave of Mr. Crockett.

In South Central Tennessee and in Franklin county, about thirteen miles from Winchester, the county seat, there is a place called Round Mountain, and if we were called on to describe the place, we would just say that there is a mountain on top of another mountain. It is as near as we could estimate about 1,200 feet above the level of the plain that lies in Northern Tennessee. To the top of this mountain two hunters were winding their way one morning about the year 1834 looking for game and just as they reached the summit, they saw a bear coming towards them. Both men made ready and fired on him, but as he was generally the case, failed to reach a vital spot, and the bear smarting from wounds, made his adversaries. WEST VIEW.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1894.

BEWLEYVILLE.

Miss Leah Payne is visiting relatives near Hardinsburg.

Mrs. Hattie McCas is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Bennett.

Quarterly meeting at this place the first Sunday was well attended.

Miss Laura Elder, of Owensboro, has been at the bedside of her sister, Mrs. Beavin.

Mr. Charlie Hardaway, of Hardin county, visited his brother, Mr. J. M. Hardaway last week.

Several from this place contemplate taking in the entertainment at Hardinsburg next Wednesday night.

Misses Ella and Nettie Schumate, of Hill Grove, were the guests of Miss Victoria and Ollie Payne Sunday.

Messrs. Pierce Hardaway and Roy Cain and Misses Blanche Jolly and Mary Blanford attended church at Big Spring Sunday.

Miss Bettie Drury went to Hardinsburg Wednesday. She will take part in an entertainment to be given at that place Wednesday night.

Mr. Julian Beavin died at her home Wednesday night, May 21st. She had been confined to her bed several months with consumption, but before her suffering heavily to the last. Funeral services were conducted Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Catholic cemetery near Irvington. The family has the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

Dr. Hart, of McDaniels, was in this place Monday.

West View can again boast of two large dry-goods stores.

The sheep of this neighborhood are having a fearful time.

Great in Genius Great in Weakness.

HARDINSBURG, KY., May 14, 1894.

When in the course of human events a man honored of men and admired of women, occupying a position high in the councils of the nation by his will and acts, proves himself false to honor and to humanity by violating his marriage vows, demonstrating his unworthiness of being a husband and father, admitting that he has pandered to the lowest and most ignoble passions of the human soul comes before an intelligent constituency asking their endorsement for a seat in Congress, it would be well for his Congressional district, for Kentucky and for this nation that they consider well the far reaching influences and consequences of their decision, which is to be rendered through their ballot.

The school-boy and school-girl of today are familiar with the published accounts of the celebrated "breach of promise and seduction suit," instituted by Madeline Tolland against W. C. P. Breckinridge, Kentucky's famed orator and Congressman. The great details of our land have recurred all the details as testified to in court.

The question in the minds of the youth of the land, is may a man who so far, as natural genius and acquired education are concerned, be so unworthy of the national confidence as to be a traitor to his country, and then after nine years of deception, folly and rotteness brought to light through the desire for revenge of a scorned, if not wronged woman, may he again call into requisition his abilities in convincing the voters of his district that they should reelect him to Congress, in stead of a man more worthy? (It can be found).

If this be true, then the most potent reason for acquiring educational ability is that we may live in corruption and treachery and yet retain position and prominence among men.

It is said that the human race is degenerating, it certainly seems a stage of deterioration, when intelligent people are willing, (if they are) to retain in Congress, to participate in making laws for them and their posterity, a man who though he be the very embodiment and quintessence of grandiloquence, evinces weakness that disqualifies him for honors to which he aspires, but does not merit.

It may be true that catastrophes and convulsions are as much a part of the plan of nature as quiescence and harmony, and that the rise and fall of nations is a circle of revolutions, that a nation rises in the scale of progress, development and civilization to a certain point and then falls of its own inability and weakness.

A few hundred years ago the degenerate was proclaimed that man was capable of self-government, upon that principle was founded our free republic, which, has been our pride and has been respected and honored by the civilized world.

The stability and durability of our government is derived from the people, while their intellectual integrity, which, with honesty, frugality and morality. This government will stand, when personal aggrandizement, deception, bribery and the influence of disloyal names, we may realize the portent of coming national disaster, if not dissolution.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

(Farmers Home Journal).

The market has been without special features this week. The slight advance during the day on Thursday of last week and which was noted in our last report has barely been sustained this week.

The warm days of this week have started fresh tobacco into a decided sweat, and it is of course impossible to tell whether it will come through the sweat sweet or not. Buyers are examining the condition of the hoghead very closely and are discounting the price heavily for soft condition. Color types meet with best demand. Good red fillers are steady and strong, while common red fillers have eased up perceptibly since last week, and are a trifle irregular.

The week has been exceedingly favorable to the growth of plants, and setting is progressing rapidly, whenever they have had a season.
